

5

10

A system, method and computer program product are disclosed for delivering content utilizing a guaranteed bandwidth network service. Content is stored in a central server. Requests are received at the central server from a user at a computer terminal utilizing a virtual private network. The requests are routed from a module positioned within one thousand (1000) feet from the computer terminal and which is capable of sending the requests to other destinations utilizing the Internet.